

HADDOCKER THROWN DOWN BY SEA ON BANK

TWO ARRIVALS SINCE YESTERDAY

DRAGGER AND TRAWLER LAN'D
SMALL FARES OF FRESH FISH.

Due to high winds off-shore yesterday, none of the boats went out to fish and today, the only arrivals reported are one off-shore dragger and a small fare from a trawler. There were several craft at Boston yesterday, which came down to refit. No sailings were reported up to noon.

Portland, Me., Arrivals.

Only 12,000 pounds of groundfish were brought to Portland, Me., yesterday, by two craft, the Alice M. Doughty II., 7000 pounds, and the Fannie Bell, 5000 pounds. They were the only ships of the local fleet that fished. Some returned here and others put in at Bailey Island and Cape Porpoise.

Sch. Frances J. Manta Had Thrilling Time Sunday Night---Limps Back to Port, Badly Leaking

Sch. Frances J. Manta limped into the Boston fish pier during the night, badly leaking, as a result of being hove down at sea last Sunday evening.

The Manta was jogging on Georges, about 160 miles southeast of the Highlands, Capt. Kevin Cleary, the skipper figures, during a heavy blow. Suddenly without warning, a huge sea, swept across the craft, throwing her down and sending tons of water into the forecabin.

A Thrilling Moment.

It was a thrilling moment for all hands, who thought their doom had been sealed. The craft remained under water for several seconds, until she finally righted herself, much to the relief of all hands.

Several pieces of her sheathing was started and she commenced to leak badly. The pumps were put to work and the craft pointed for home. It was a slow passage and all went well until last night, when she again ran into a heavy blow, which retarded her progress.

The Manta reached the pier without further mishap and will go on the railways for an overhauling and repairs.
